

Tavia Rhodes

“A blend of stunning vocals, an organic tapestry of acoustic instruments, and darker, electronic elements that never shy away from vulnerability.”

BIO

Seattle-based singer-songwriter, Tavia Rhodes’ music is a dynamic example of what happens when precise musical training meets the raw, passionate edge of creative instinct.

As a sought-after vocalist in Seattle’s musical community, Rhodes’ previous projects have included guest spots with local cover bands, session work for film and video game soundtracks, and as longstanding backup singer for Seattle bands Fading Collection and Modern Relics. 2019 was Rhodes’ debut year as a solo artist with the release of her first single, “Her Eyes.”

Rhodes’ compositions are as versatile as her vocal range, slipping gracefully between contemplative folksiness, dark soulful electro-melodies, and incantational refrains. Grappling with and embracing themes of grief, resilience, love, and the feminine spirit at its most potent, her songs represent a seismic shift in the soul.

With lyrics that put words to ineffable emotions and melodies both somber and uplifting, her songs are a tribute to the “hers” of the world. Her second single “The Last Witch” is a timely expression of women finding their voice and reestablishing sovereignty over their lives.
